WILLIAM LOUIS SORENSEN

The sound and movement scanning a picture.

A diaslide or a number of diaslides is/are placed in the circle cassette magazine of a projector.
The shifting mechanism that replaces the picture or pictures is produced by one or several switches at the same time.

a switch
a number of switches

I.A diaslide is placed in an empty cassette and moved by the impulses of a single switch (i.e. one of the four mentioned).

II.A number of diaslides are placed in a cassette and moved by the impulses of at least two switches (or all of the four mentioned).
The number of slides may consist of series of slides,slides presented by persons present or any slide picked out.

projector

The switches are :
1.A sound adaptor which only at a specific frequency produces the impulse that shifts the slide (several adaptors of different frequencies may be used).
2.An ordinary switch to be pressed on by a movement from a finger,door,foot, window,etc.that will produce a shift of the slide (several switches at different places).
3.A tape played back on a tape-recorder, which is prepared with the shifting impulses within the loudreading of this project e.g. at any arrival of the letter "a".
4.A system of photo-electric cells may be used or combined with the above mentioned switching impulses.
