A Distinguished Set of "Counter-Bicentennial" Cards

You can put an "unofficial history" of America onto the wall, into the mails, into your friends' hands, with these five full-color postcards. Each card illustrates a phase of the struggle for freedom in the United States, as brilliantly realized in American art. The official Bicentennial would happily have us forget the struggle of the colonies against Empire (Trumbull's "Bunker's Hill")—the fight for economic Democracy (Koehler's "The Strike")—the never ending fight for freedom of Thought (Koehler's "The Socialist")—the struggles for Racial equality (West Gale's "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner") and Feminist equality (Sawyer's "Birth").

Only 75¢ list price for the set of five—plus 25¢ shipping if bought separately from Green Mountain. Organizational and retail inquiries invited. Get a set now, or several—see if you don't think they're the answer to the bad memory of the official celebrants!
