There are about 1000 literary magazines in the U.S. The species (like the insects) has hardy longevity, but individual titles frequently appear and die within a single year. A few distinguishing characteristics about ASPECT: We have published 73 issues since 1969. ASPECT presents a wide diversity of fiction, poetry, and essays, including some experimental work, with a conscious attempt to shake the staid or clique attributes that make many mags less accessible: we are especially pleased by first-appearance writers in our pages. Each ASPECT offers about 20 pages of news and review coverage, including information on grants and manuscript needs, and features fine art and photography as well.

One of America's Great Littlemags!

KUDOS for ASPECT

"Very fine production. You're consistent and reliable, which is rare in the small press world."
—John Bennett, Vagabond.

"Critical essays at the back of the mag, small press reviews, and New England literary news are stimulating sources for readers, a tool for writers."
—Val Morehouse, ALA Booklist.

"One of the thriving literary journals which makes me aware of real changes in the small press scene for women."
—Anne Pride, KNOW Newsletter.
